

For Valentine's day in 2012, trying to come up with something nice for hubby and I to do. We're pretty simple- wine, cheese, crackers and conversation is one of our favorite things to do. However, after being together for a long time, sometimes getting the conversation going can be a little challenging, especially conversation that doesn't involve bills, work, family problems, etc. So, I invented this list of questions. I printed them, cut each one out, and put them in a cute little basket. When the big day came, I got out the basket of questions, lit some candles and got our wine/cheese/crackers all ready to go. We took turns asking each other the questions, but both of us answered each question. It was quite interesting and plenty of fun.
